What is Linkpendium?

- From Amy Johnson Crow website - <https://www.amyjohnsoncrow.com/find-millions-of-genealogy-websites/>
- "Linkpendium is a site with more than 10 million links to genealogy resources. (That's a whole lot of websites!) It was created by Karen and Brian "Wolf" Leverich, the creators of RootsWeb — people who know about genealogy on the Internet. Those 10 million links include more than 1 million to U.S. resources, more than 9 million surname pages (worldwide), and about 10,000 UK links.
- It's also a search engine which covers 2.8 million of those pages. (More on that below.)
- Not only are these sites curated (meaning that they've been met the criteria for covering something meaningful for family historians), the site is constantly monitored for dead links. (Don't you hate it when you click on a link and that page doesn't exist anymore? So do the Leverichs. That's why they check and get rid of the dead links.)"

How to Explore: The Surname Directory

- The Surname Directory lets you follow links to resources for families worldwide that interest you. By following the links, you will see many possible variations on your family name.
- IMPORTANT: The locality and family surname pages include many resources that could not be included in the search engine. When you are trying to break down a genealogical brick wall, always use the locality and family surname pages in addition to the Family Discoverer. ;)
